'I love my sister'

Facing a tragedy.

Brother of Carine Rabay says family in shock, trying to deal with teen's death in SUV crash

TREVOR GREENWAY trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

Joe Rabay, a 15-year-old Ottawa student, is grappling with the loss of his 14-year-old sister Carine after their family SUV rolled over in upstate New York Sunday, killing Carine and seriously injuring his mother and grandmother.

Still in shock as he tries to come to grips with the family tragedy, he has begun having nightmares about his sister.

"Last night, I was waking up in the middle of the night with my body tingling," he told Metro Tuesday morning. "Nightmares and I feel her here. I feel her presence."

The St. Pius High School student is stranded in Ottawa while his mother, 44, and grandmother, 77, undergo extensive surgery in New York for broken ribs, a broken arm and a broken jaw.

He said his mother and grandmother aren't yet aware that Carine died and won't be told the terrible news until after surgery.

His nine-year-old sister was also in the car, but was not injured.

"I need to stay strong in front of my little sister. When my mom comes back, I will have to calm her down.

"She is the one I am most worried about," said Joe Rabay.

Five people were travelling in the family's SUV Sunday in Watertown, N.Y., when police say the 50-year-old driver veered off the road, struck a guardrail and rolled down a steep embankment.

Carine, who was not wearing a seatbelt, was ejected from the vehicle and was pronounced dead at the scene.

Rabay says he desperately misses his sister — from the casual bike rides the two would take, to the more intense kickboxing classes they recently started taking together.

It's hard to be at home, as every time he walks past her room, he pictures her sitting there.

"Everything I do, I see her. Even when I go boxing — the thing that makes me forget about everything — I see her.

"It's going to be very hard, I love my sister," he said, fighting back tears.

Joe Rabay has also started a seatbelt campaign called "Wear it for Carine" and is handing out bracelets at Frank Ryan Catholic Intermediate School, where she attended Grade 8.

Do you know why a mortgage document is so big? It's because there's a lot more in it than just the rate.

Why lowest isn't always best.

Don't get us wrong. A low rate is great. But most low rate mortgages come with restrictive terms that could keep you in your mortgage longer than you'd like. Which means paying interest longer than you'd like. So, instead of thinking about the cost of your mortgage in rate terms, think about it in dollar terms. For example, how much interest will you pay over the life of your mortgage?

How restrictive terms cost you in the end.

The key to saving interest costs is having the flexibility to increase payments or make extra payments. With rates as low as they are, regular lump sum and increased payments will save you more interest over the life of your mortgage. Even more than switching to bi-weekly payments!

Good advice is worth its weight in gold.

Locking in at today's low rates might be right for you. But keep in mind that small changes can make a big difference in helping you become mortgage-free faster so keeping that flexibility is essential.

So how can we offer a rate this low with the benefits you want?

Since we refuse to overload our mortgages with restrictions and we insist on giving people competitively low rates, the only way we can do it is for a limited time.

Airport Parkway. City suing engineering firm over 'troubled' design

The city of Ottawa is suing an engineering company for $4.6 million for the role it played in the "troubled" Airport Parkway bridge project.

Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson announced Tuesday that the city launched the multimilliondollar lawsuit against WSP Canada Inc, formerly Genivar—the company hired to build the Airport Parkway Pedestrian/Cycling Bridge.

Watson said the city is taking a stand to hold consultants accountable for the project that is already three years late and close to $5 million over its $6.5 million budget.

"We are calling on Genivar to pay for the $4.6 million in costs that have resulted from their design," said Watson in a statement. "This multi-million dollar claim demonstrates our commitment to holding outside consultants accountable for the role that they played in this troubled project."

None of the city's claims have been proven in court. WSP Canada Inc. declined to comment Tuesday.

Divert mentally ill from jail, unions say

Ottawa Carleton Detention Centre. The number of offenders with mental illnesses is increasing, activists say

JOE LOFARO joe.lofaro@metronews.c

More money should be invested in training people working in Ontario's justice system about how to deal with the mentally ill and divert them away from jail and into treatment, union heads said Tuesday.

Denis Collin, a correctional officer at the Ottawa Carleton Detention Centre and president of the local OPSEU 411, said at a press conference Tuesday the jail is seeing an increasing number of offenders who have mental health problems, who should really be getting professional help elsewhere.

On Sunday, Torstar News Service reported Mental Health Act apprehensions by Toronto police have skyrocketed from 520 in 1997 to 8,441 in 2013. Some advocates say Ontario's mental health funding—which has dropped to 7 per cent from 11.3 in 1970— is to blame for this increase in police encounters with the mentally ill.

Marlene Rivier, Royal Ottawa Hospital worker and president of OPSEU local 479, said correctional officers are put in a "terrible disadvantage" when dealing with people with mental illness.

"It costs a lot of money to keep somebody in jail. So, spend that money diverting," she said. "That's good effect for your money because now you're moving somebody out of the system, establishing them in the community safely so that they can live healthy and productive lives."

"Every inmate in Ontario deserves to be treated fairly, with respect, and have the same access to supports as those in the community," said Community Safety Minister Yasir Naqvi. "We have invested $50 million since 2004 in service enhancements and officers are trained to detect possible signs of mental illness, and how to refer these inmates to health care or other professional staff that can provide the appropriate level of care."

Medical marijuana. Company clashes with city over buffer zones

A medical-marijuana company is disputing what it calls "excessive" buffer zones laid out in a city bylaw regulating grow-ops.

Cannabis Canada Medical Inc. is appealing the zoning amendment to the Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) on the grounds that the required 150-metre setback is "onerous."

According to the appeal, the noise and odour issues do not require that large a buffer zone, because the smells will be contained, the building will be well insulated and growing plants is a quiet process.

Most other regions in Ontario only require a setback of 50 to 100 metres, the appeal

City councillors voted in favour of the bylaw zoning amendment on Feb. 26, allowing licensed medical-marijuana grow-ops to set up shop in certain industrial zones within the city and set back from neighbourhoods.

Several residents, including the head of the Katimavik Hazeldean Community Association (KHCA), have previously voiced concerns about security and buffer zones.

In a letter to city council, Cannabis Canada Medical Inc. president Peter Crowe said that the bylaw amendment also does not consider the range of pot-production-plant sizes. He argues that it's slanted towards large-scale facilities.

The OMB hearing will be Aug. 28. Lucy scholey/METRO

Survivors reflect on Tiananmen horrors

'I want to remember their names.' Witnesses recount story to U of O students 25 years later Liane Lee remembers holding back a screaming 12-year-old boy in Tiananmen Square.

"They killed my brother. They killed my brother!" she recalls him yelling to the soldiers who had been firing at the pro-democracy protesters. It was the early hours of June 4, 1989, a day that Lee still struggles to talk about 25 years later. But she recounted the bloody military massacre to an audience at the University of Ottawa on Tuesday.

Then a 26-year-old university student from Hong Kong, Lee held the boy back until he finally wriggled away. She says she still remembers the smell of his sweat and the warmth of his tears. Witnesses say the boy's body was later carried to the first aid station, covered in blood, but Lee does not remember that. She figures she blocked it from her memory.

Now 55 and living in Cleveland, Lee says many Chinese people have accused her of lying about the massacre that killed a still-unknown num-

Chen Yuguo was a teacher at Beijing University who had been camping out at the square in the days leading up to the massacre. He was in one of the last groups that left at about 5 a.m. on June 4, after seeing many people crushed by tanks and a colleague "badly, almost fatally stabbed."

Cheuk Kwan, of the Toronto Association for Democracy in China, said human rights have "deteriorated" in China since the Tiananmen Square massacre.

Riverfront revitalization spurs dispute over land

Redevelopment?

Gatineau councillor, Algonquins disagree about who owns Ottawa riverfront

TREVOR GREENWAY trevor.greenway@metr

A Gatineau city councillor dismissed the idea that a planned Ottawa riverfront revitalization would infringe aboriginal rights because, she said, the city has expropriated the land.

A group of aboriginal neighbours in Gatineau say the city's plan to revitalize the waterfront along Jacques Cartier Street infringes on their traditional rights to access the Ottawa River.

Councillor for the Gatineau ward Myriam Nadeau told Metro Tuesday the project does not infringe on aboriginal rights, as the city expropriated all of the waterfront land over the past two years and is now the owner of the waterfront.

"The question of aboriginal consultations, I am not aware that this project is on any aboriginal land. That is a recent claim," she said, explaining that the project is more inclusive than exclusive as it is making the waterfront a public space for everyone, aboriginals included.

Chief of Algonquins Off-Reserve Roger Fleury disagrees with Nadeau, arguing that there was never a land treaty negotiated for the area and that the land does indeed belong to his people.

"This is a non-negotiable right, for us to have access to the water," he said.

"We never seceded the land. This is our land."

Fleury and other aboriginal leaders in the area say they were never consulted on the project. Work is slatted to begin this summer.

Standing in a teepee beside one of the last remaining private docks along the road, resident John Savage told a handful of reporters that the city's plan to remove his dock and replace it with a slick boardwalk, waterfront pathways and several marinas will turn the area from a natural paradise into a "Miami Vice" of the north.

"Their vision is a Miami Vice vision — one of motorboats, fast boats going up and down, partiers, marinas up and down, glass highrises that will tower over Rockcliffe," he said.

"You won't be able to see the hills through the condos."

The city's $42-million Jacques Cartier Street Improvement Project will give the entire area a major facelift with a boardwalk, pathways, several marinas as well as benches and waterfront picnic areas.

Protesters raise three fingers against Thai junta

The Hunger Games.

Opponents to the military coup adopt salute from the Hollywood blockbuster

The three-finger salute from the Hollywood movie The Hunger Games is being used as a real symbol of resistance in Thailand. Protesters against the military coup are flashing the gesture as a silent act of rebellion, and they're being threatened with arrest if they ignore warnings to stop.

Thailand's military rulers said Tuesday they were monitoring the new form of opposition to the coup. Reporters witnessed the phenomenon and individuals were captured on film making the raised-arm salute.

"Raising three fingers has become a symbol in calling for fundamental political rights," said anti-coup activist Sombat Boonngam-anong on his Face-book page. He called on people to raise "3 fingers, 3 times a day" — at 9 a.m., 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. — in safe places where no police or military are present.

The gesture emerged over the weekend as protesters joined small flash mobs, or stood alone, flashing three fingers in the air.

"We know it comes from the movie, and let's say it represents resistance against the authorities," Col. Weerachon Sukhondhapatipak, a spokesman for the junta, told The Associated Press.

"If a single individual raises three fingers in the air, we are not going to arrest him or her," he said. "But if it is a political gathering of five people or more, then we will have to take some action."

In The Hunger Games movie series and book trilogy, the salute symbolizes rebellion against totalitarian rule, signifying thanks, admiration and goodbye to a loved one.

Reports say officers helping Boko Haram

Ten generals and five other senior military officers have been found guilty in courtsmartial of providing arms and information to Boko Haram extremists, several Nigerian newspapers said Tuesday, though the military insisted there was no truth in the reports.

They follow months of allegations from politicians and soldiers who told The Associated Press that some senior officers were helping the Islamic extremists and that some rank-and-file soldiers even fight alongside the insurgents and then return to army camps. They have said that information provided by army officers has helped insurgents in ambushing military convoys and in attacks on army barracks and outposts in their northeastern stronghold.

Leadership newspaper quoted one officer saying that four other officers, in addition to the 15, were found guilty of "being disloyal and for working for the members of the sect."

Defence Ministry spokesman Maj. Gen. Chris Olukolade, who last week denied reports saying senior officers were being investigated, reiterated in a statement on Tuesday that defence head-quarters "wishes to state once again categorically that there is no truth whatsoever in the report."

He called it a "falsehood" concocted by those who "appear hell-bent on misleading Nigerians and the international community to give credence to the negative impression they are so keen to propagate about the Nigerian military."

Nigeria's military often denies substantiated reports, such as on extrajudicial killings of civilians and detainees. It is accused of such gross human rights violations that the U.S. efforts to help in the rescue of nearly 300 abducted schoolgirls have been limited by U.S. law restricting sharing of some types of information and technology with abusive security forces.

Three-parent IVF babies. GMO embryos found 'not unsafe': U.K. regulator

Britain's fertility regulator says controversial techniques to create embryos from the DNA of three people "do not appear to be unsafe" even though no one has ever received the treatment, according to report released Tuesday.

The report is based its conclusion largely on lab tests and some animal experiments.

"Until a healthy baby is born, we cannot say 100 per cent that these techniques are safe," said Dr. Andy Greenfield, who chaired the expert panel behind the report.

The techniques are meant to stop mothers from passing on potentially fatal genetic diseases to their babies and involve altering a human egg or embryo before transferring it into a woman.

Marcy Darnovsky, of the Center for Genetics and Society in the U.S., warned that allowing the method might lead to scientists and parents using the techniques to create designer babies with certain traits.

Experts say that if approved, the methods would likely be used in about a dozen British women every year, who are known to have faulty mitochondria. Genetic defects in the mitochondria can result in diseases such as muscular dystrophy, heart problems and mental retardation.

Hundreds signed. Letter from scientists to PM: reject Northern Gateway

A letter signed by hundreds of scientists from around the world is urging Prime Minister Stephen Harper to reject a federal panel report recommending approval of the Northern Gateway pipeline.

The federal government must release its final decision by June 17.

The letter sent this week to Harper and several key cabinet ministers said the report by the joint review panel is "indefensible as a basis to judge in favour of the project."

It was signed by 300 scientists at universities from Newfoundland to Vancouver Island, along with colleagues from international institutions including Stanford, Cornell and Oxford.

The chief concern from the group is that the panel did not look at the increase in global greenhouse gas emissions that will result from the expansion in oilsands production.

Girl in stabbing case may be mentally ill: Lawyer

Alleged plot. Two girls have been charged with first-degree attempted homicide in a stabbing to please a fictional Internet character

A 12-year-old girl accused of plotting to kill a friend to curry favour with a fictional Internet character shows signs of mental illness and should be in a hospital, her defence attorney said Tuesday.

The girl and another 12-yearold have been charged as adults with first-degree attempted homicide in a stabbing that nearly killed another child the same age.

The two girls reportedly said to investigators that they had plotted for months to kill their friend because a character called Slenderman required them to kill someone before they could become his "proxy."

Both girls are being held at a juvenile detention centre. Anthony Cotton, the attorney for one girl, said a judge rejected his request Monday to have the girl transferred to a mental health facility, but he will renew that request when she returns to court next week.

"From what I know, we've got a young girl here who has no previous criminal record at all, and if the record is accurate, probably suffers from very serious mental health issues," said Cotton.

Cotton said the girl's parents are trying to figure out whether there were any signs they may have missed.

The girls told investigators they read about Slenderman on the horror website creepypasta. wikia.com. It's not clear whether they got access to the site at home or at school.

Both were charged Monday in Waukesha County Circuit Court; they each face up to 65 years in prison if convicted. A court commissioner set bail at $500,000 cash per child.

The Green Party of Ontario, despite having no elected MPPs, has ambitious plans for the province: dismantle the Catholic school system, adopt proportional representation, use revenue tools to raise money to build public transit and bust up the beer duopoly.

"The Green party, in this campaign, we're really on a mission to bring honesty, integrity and good public policy to Queen's Park," said GPO Leader Mike Schreiner in a one-on-one interview with Metro, as part of our series of interviews with party leaders.

"The one thing I'm hearing over and over again — knocking on doors, going to cafés, things like that — is people are really tired of the political games going on at Queen's Park. They're tired of the gimmicks, the scandals, the magic math of the three status quo parties' platforms and the debate that Queen's Park is producing."

Schreiner is running in Guelph, where according to projections by threehundre-deight.com, there's currently a 76 per cent chance the Liberal candidate will win. However, Schreiner has been polling in second place, marginally ahead of the Progressive Conservative candidate.

Schreiner has been campaigning to get one or two Green MPPs into the legislature, following the example set by federal Green Leader Elizabeth May.

He acknowledges that proportional representation, which his party supports, would benefit his party, but also argues it's good public policy.

"I want every vote to count," he said. "If you're a Liberal voter in rural Ontario, you're likely to think that your vote doesn't count because you're probably in a riding that always votes Conservative. Likewise, if you're a Conservative voter in downtown Toronto, where it usually

As part of a series of Metro interviews with provincial leaders ahead of the June 12 election, Mike Schreiner argues why proportional representation is good public policy, makes his case for stopping funding for Catholic schools and addresses the resignation of the Green party's London West candidate. For video highlights, go to metronews.ca.

PLEDGING TO DISMANTLE THE CATHOLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM

goes Liberal or NDP, it's like your vote doesn't count either. And if you're a newer party, it's very difficult."

Schreiner said Greens would have 10 or 12 MPPs if we had proportional representation in Canada.

"In Ontario we have zero seats in the legislature, so those hundreds of thousands of people who support us don't have a voice at Queen's Park," he said. "By moving to proportional representation you eliminate strategic voting, you minimize the amount of negative campaigning which goes on, which increasingly tends to dominate our elections, and you force parties to transparently figure out ways to co-operate in the public interest, rather than in their political self-interest."

However, proportional representation wasn't actually in the Green's platform this election. Instead, it's focused on jobs, kids and the environment. One of the most notable policies is the pledge to dismantle the public Catholic school system and stop funding Catholic schools.

"We have 124 schools across the province slated for closure, another 174 being threatened to be closed.

We have kids who are being bused across town long distances because they can't go to their neighbourhood school because they're the wrong religion," he said. "It would free up up to $1.6 billion, which could be reinvested back into our children's classrooms."

The motivation isn't purely financial. Schreiner says the Catholic boards are also subject to "persistent human rights concerns."

The Greens propose doubling the Ontario Child Benefit, and paying for it by ending the Ontario Clean Energy Benefit, which is a 10 per cent rebate on hydro bills.

The rebate "costs Ontario $1.1 billion a year, and it's a benefit that primarily benefits the wealthy.... The people who use the most electricity get the most benefit because it's just 10 per cent of whatever you use," he said. "Let's stop that handout, which actually undermines conservation programs and energy efficiency programs anyway, and let's use those resources on focusing on getting children out of poverty right now."

The party's long-term strategy is to move to a guaranteed annual income. "It sounds like kind of a radical left-wing idea, but it's actually an idea that has been mostly promoted by conservatives because it's a small-government approach to addressing poverty," he said.

"Instead of having a biggovernment bureaucracy policing the poor, which, you know, there isn't a lot of dignity associated with, let's take that money and actually put it in the pockets of the people who need it the most. ... Initial studies suggest that it could be mostly paid for by reducing the government bureaucracy around policing the poor."

The Green party has seen little controversy in the election outside of the loss of Gary Brown, its candidate for London West, early in the campaign. Brown resigned and posted a message saying he would be focusing on local issues. "The Green Party of Ontario's platform still best reflects my values but the lack of commitment and effort from the party to contest and win elections has always been at odds with my personal work ethic," Brown wrote. "With Premiere Wynne advocating for many of the issues I support I am no longer sure that my strong advocacy for green issues as a GPO candidate is the most effective way to effect change."

In response, Schreiner said he believes Greens work hard, "running on four or five hours sleep at night, seven days a week ... to elect our first Green MPP."

HBC's luxury revamp pays off

Hudson's Bay Company.

The Canadian retailer reported first-quarter net earnings of $176 million

The Hudson's Bay Company hopes a trend toward luxury goods will continue to boost its bottom line after swinging to a first-quarter profit on strong sales from Saks Fifth Avenue.

"We've been seeing a very strong, positive trend in luxury items — the more unique, the more expensive, the more special a product is, the greater the demand we seem to be getting, so that bodes well for Saks," HBC governor and CEO Richard Baker said during a conference call Tuesday to discuss first-quarter results.

Instagram. Spend even more time editing pics

The photo-sharing app Instagram is adding editing tools that go beyond the vintage-looking filters that made it popular.

The Facebook-owned app said in a blog post Tuesday that users will be able to adjust the brightness, contrast, saturation and other features of photos they take with their smartphones.

The tools are available after downloading the newest version of Instagram, 6.0, on Android or Apple phones. The photo editing tools will appear under a wrench icon.

Instagram's filters can enhance photos or add a certain hue to them, to make them look like they were taken with a Polaroid camera in the 1970s. But as smartphone cameras have improved, many users have become more sophisticated about their snapshots. Some have turned to other apps with more powerful editing tools to fix photos before posting them on Instagram. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIKE TIPPING, BUT WITHOUT THE TIP

It may cost more, especially when you add in the ferry ride to Vancouver Island, but we'll have to start having lunch at Smoke 'N Water, the new restaurant at the Pacific Shores Resort in Parksville.

Not only does the food look simple and good, Smoke 'N Water has a spectacular 6,000-gallon fish tank/aquarium.

Oh, and it's the first no-tipping restaurant in Canada.

Smoke 'N Water opened yesterday, and although I've been vigilantly scanning the Vancouver Island news, there are no reports of server riots or customer fainting spells. But it's

As you may remember, I've written about tipping before, almost exactly a year ago, when a number of U.S. restaurants introduced a no-tipping policy. But this is Canada, land of peace, order and everything-should-stay-the-same. Food-industry experts are calling owner David Jones naive for his view that "tipping is a broken business model," but anyone who ever tries to do anything is naive. Until it succeeds.

Jones is going to actually pay his servers a living wage - between $20 and $24 an hour. Notoriously underpaid and overworked cooks will get $16 to $18. He'll even pay medical and dental, which is rare in Restaurantland.

Here's the hitch — prices will be about 18 per cent higher than the average. Jones is betting you'll pay roughly the same as you would if you left a tip just so you don't have to leave a tip.

So let's do the math. At $24 an hour, that's $192 for an eight-hour shift. If you're earning servers' minimum wage, which in B.C. is $9 an hour, you make a base of $72. You have to make up the rest on tips. Granted, servers can make well over $100 a day on tips, but they have to do a lot of stupid server tricks to make sure they get one — pretend to love everything on the menu, put little smiley faces on the bill, hover anxiously and expectantly

Jones is betting you'll pay roughly the same as you would if you left a tip just so you don't have to while the customer figures out the 15 or 20 per cent. This way, you get paid and retain your dignity. Crazy.

It's too early to tell if this will set a trend or if Smoke 'N Water will turn into so much smoke-'n-water damage. But what's not to like? If you're a customer, you can walk into a restaurant expecting good service to be part of the, um, service, not requiring an extra bribe. If you're a server, you're a member of a fairly paid team that works together to provide a superior dining experience. Like a grown-up.

And if you're David Jones, columnists across the continent write about your new restaurant the day after it opens. Naive, eh?

Still life?

An ear made of human cells is grown from samples provided from a distant relative of Dutch artist Vincent van Gogh. U.S.-based artist Diemut Strebe said she wants to combine art and science with the installation.

Replica of van Gogh's ear grown from relative's DNA

A German museum has put on display a copy of Vincent van Gogh's ear that was grown using some of the Dutch artist's genetic material.

The Center for Art and Media in Karlsruhe says the ear consists of living cells grown from samples provided by the great-grandson of van Gogh's brother. The museum says the genes are about 1/16th identical. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ear-y legend

He's known as the tortured genius who cut off his own ear, but two German historians claim that van Gogh lost his ear in a fight with his friend and fellow artist Paul Gauguin, with whom he was hopelessly infatuated.

- The official version usually goes that the disturbed Dutch painter severed his left ear lobe with a razor blade in a fit of lunacy one evening shortly before Christmas 1888. Bleeding heavily, van Gogh then wrapped it in cloth, walked to a nearby bordello and presented the severed ear to a prostitute.
- A book argues that van Gogh may have made up the story to protect Gauguin, a keen fencer, who actually lopped it off with a sword during a heated argument.

Boston: Beyond the Affleck

Boston is known for a lot of things: Mark Wahlberg, Ben Affleck, its local accent's dearth of R's and, unlike some places we could name, consistently successful sports teams.

Since the marathon bombings and the resulting ascendancy of the "Boston Strong" meme — resilience has also become central to the city's identity. This video portrait goes beyond first glimpses of Beantown life and celebrates the city in all its stunning glory. Every town deserves this kind of Stone ready to polarize audiences once again

Oliver Stone will write and direct a film about Edward Snowden, one of two high-profile films in the works about the National Security Agency leaker.

Stone announced Monday that he plans to adapt "The Snowden Files: The Inside Story of the World's Most Wanted Man," a book by Guardian journalist Luke Harding.

The project pairs one of cinema's most controversial directors with one of the most explosive news events in recent years —one that is ongoing.

"This is one of the greatest stories of our time," Stone said in a statement. He added that making such a film is "a real challenge."

He will have some deep-pocketed competition. Sony Pictures last month purchased the big-screen rights to Glenn Greenwald's "No Place to Hide: Edward Snowden, the NSA and the U.S. Surveillance State."

The film is being produced by James Bond producers Barbara Broccoli and Michael G. Wilson.

Stone has advocated for the former NSA contract systems analyst, who is living in Russia on a temporary grant of asylum after leaking massive amounts of NSA documents to the media.

"To me, Snowden is a hero because he revealed secrets that we should all know, that the United States has repeatedly violated the Fourth Amendment," Stone said in a press conference at the Karlovy Vary Film Festival in the Czech Republic. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Live. Die. Repeat.

👸 vu for Tom Cruise and Emily Blunt as she explains why wearing all of that gear must feel like an eternity in their new movie Edge of Tomorrow. соnтributed

Tomorrow, today, yesterday. Latest Tom Cruise flick sees its own shadow in a recurring theme on the big screen

IN FOCUS Richard Crouse scene@metronews.ca

"How many times have we been here," asks Rita (Emily Blunt). "For me, it's been an eternity," replies William (Cruise) as he relives the same day of an alien invasion over and over.

Edge of Tomorrow is a timeloop movie that can best be described as War of the Worlds meets Groundhog Day. In Groundhog Day, Bill Murray says, "Every morning I wake up without a scratch on me, not a dent in the fender. I am an immortal." His take on a drunk, suicide-prone weatherman who discovers the beauty of life by living the same day endlessly is the granddaddy of Hollywood déjà vu stories, but other characters have been caught in cinematic time circles.

The DVD cover for 2006's Salvage asks the question, "What if every day you relived your own murder?" Originally called Gruesome for the festival circuit, the movie is as grim as Bill Murray's film is life-affirming. Called a "digital video hell — spawn of Psycho, Eyes Without a Face and Groundhog Day," by Variety, Salvage is the story of Claire (Lauren Currie Lewis), a convenience store worker who undergoes her murder over and over. Despite its extremely low budget star Lewis doubled as the film's make-up artist — Salvage was an official selection of the 2006 Sundance Festival.

The horror genre lends itself to time-bending tales. Camp Slaughter is a 2005 throwback to the slasher films of the 1980s. In this one, a group of modern teens stumble across Camp Hiawatha, a dangerous place where not-so-happy-campers are trapped in 1981 and forced to re-experience the night a maniacal murderer went on a killing spree. Labelled "Groundhog Day meets Friday the 13th (part 2,3,4,5,6,7,8... every one of them!)," by one critic, it's gory good fun.

Not into gory? The Yuletide provides a less bloody backdrop for time-looping. The title Christmas Every Day is self-explanatory but 12 Dates of Christmas is better than the name suggests. Us Weekly called this Amy Smart romantic comedy about a woman stuck in an endless Christmas Eve, a sweet "nicely woven journey."

Finally, the aptly named Repeaters is a Canadian film written by Arne Olsen, scribe of Power Rangers: The Movie. Repeaters is about a trio of recovering addicts who find themselves in "an impossible time labyrinth" after being electrocuted in a storm. Like most time-bending films, Repeaters is about learning from your mistakes. What sets it apart from some of the others are three unlikeable leads who use their situation to raise hell and break the law.

No fault in rising star among 'nerdfighters'

YA fiction. Unassuming Writer guy John Green finds fame as teen bestseller becomes film

When The Fault in Our Stars landed on bookshelves more than two years ago, John Green's enthusiasm was non-existent for a screen version of his story featuring teens with cancer.

"I had had some Hollywood experiences before that weren't great and I felt like Hollywood would struggle to make a movie where the female romantic lead has nasal cannula tubes in her nose for the entire movie," he said.

Well, hello 2014, and

Well, hello 2014, and Monday night's premiere of TFIOS, the movie. It's the first of Green's bestselling books to go Hollywood after he was won over by the script's dedication to his characters in the clutches of adolescence. Oh, and it didn't hurt that one of the producers was a huge Liverpool soccer club fan like Green.

Already a rock star among young readers, mostly of the teen girl variety, the Orlando, Fla.-raised Green, the guy who looks straight out of central casting as Unassuming Writer, now walks red carpets, clowns on morning TV and banters with new BFF Nat Wolff and the movie's other young stars, Shailene Woodley and newcomer Ansel Elgort.

In a plaid button-down shirt and conservative suit jacket, it was the bespectacled, 36-year-old Green — not the hunky, younger Wolff — who got the loudest screams Saturday from several hundred girls who showed up for a panel discussion about the movie during the publishing industry's annual BookExpo America.

Getting your leg over

"I'd like to thank you, John, for answering a lifelong question of mine, which is, whether during sex, I keep my leg on or off."

16-year-old amputee Robert Berger with a prosthetic like TFIOS love interest Gus Waters, references a bedroom scene during a panel discussion about the movie.

Green leapt off the stage of the stuffed conference hall to bear hug a 16-year-old amputee, Robert Berger of Damerest, N.J. Berger, a high school sophomore with a prosthetic like TFIOS love interest Gus Waters, made his way to a microphone and referenced a bedroom scene when he offered: "I'd like to thank you, John, for answering a lifelong question of mine, which is, whether during sex, I keep my leg on or off."

Green, a father of two, is ever respectful of Berger and his other "nerdfighters," the community of fans worldwide that has led him to Holly-wood's door and greet each other with his tagline: "Don't Forget to Be Awesome!" They even have a special thing they do with their arms, crossing at the chest and spreading their fingers in twos. You sort of have to be there.

The writer was vigilant as a presence on the movie's set, sobbing when the film-makers got it right and cheering on Woodley, Elgort and Wolff. Wolff is slated to star in the next stop on Green's bigscreen journey for his Paper Towns.

So, can Green hold on to his mojo? Does the writer part of his brain now need to make peace with his developing bigscreen brain?

"I hope that I'm not developing a Hollywood brain, to be honest with you. I love books. I love writing books. I love movies, too, but I am a book writer and if I'm lucky enough to be able to work with people who are great at making movies then I feel very fortunate, but I have no desire to become a movie person," he said. GOT 101. Wanna speak like a horse lord? Sign up for a Dothraki course

A new language course will soon be available for those eager to unleash their inner Khal Drogo by learning a little Dothraki.

David J. Peterson, the linguist who works on all the fictional languages for HBO's Game of Thrones, worked with Living Languages to create a guide with 500 words and phrases. The guide is called Living Language Dothraki: A Conversational Language Course Based on the Hit Original HBO Series Game of Thrones. Will the title be translated into Dothraki, as well?

For those afraid of offending, there will even be cultural notes about how to avoid an embarrassing faux pas in the language. (Here's a hint: Don't imply someone needs to walk instead of ride a horse.) Worried about forgetting that all-important phrase when you're out and about with your Dothraki chums? Not to worry, there's a mobile app for that.

The guide will be available Oct. 7, and can be obtained in the form of a physical book (by far the more periodappropriate option) or an expanded online version.

Red-carpet prankster was trying to 'bury his face in my crotch,' Brad says

Brad Pitt is finally breaking his silence about his red carpet run-in with Ukrainian prankster Vitalii Sediuk at the Maleficent premiere last week.

"I was at the end of the line signing autographs, when out of the corner of my eye I saw someone stage-diving over the barrier at me," he tells People magazine in a statement.

"I took a step back. This guy had latched onto my lapels. I looked down and the nutter was trying to bury his face in my crotch, so I cracked him twice in the back of the head — not too hard, but enough to get his attention because he did let go. I think he was then just grabbing for a handhold because the guys were on him, and he reached up and caught my glasses."

The crotch-targeting is in line with Sediuk's style of prank, as he'd been caught sticking his head under America Ferrera's dress last month on a Cannes red carpet.

The disgraced TV reporter was sentenced to three years' probation, a year of counselling and a temporary restraining order keeping him away from Pitt and Angelina Iolie.

"I don't mind an exhibitionist." Pitt insists. "But if this guy keeps it up, he's going to spoil it for the fans who have waited up all night for an autograph or a selfie, because it will make people more wary to approach a crowd. And he should know if he tries to look up a woman's dress again, he's going to get stomped. "

No jail time for DUI Dina

The mother of actress Lindsay Lohan won't go to jail for speeding and driving drunk on a New York highway.

A judge ordered Dina Lohan on Tuesday to pay over $3,000 in fines and fees. She'll also perform 100 hours of community service and participate in an anti-drunkdriving program.

Lohan pleaded guilty in April to aggravated driving while intoxicated and speeding in Nassau County on Long Island in September. She has said she was fleeing paparazzi.

Police say Lohan was driving over 120 km/h in an almost 90 km/h zone. They say her blood-alcohol level was 0.20, more than double the legal limit. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELINDA TAUB

This could just as easily be titled "Paparazzo successfully baits Jonah Hill into losing his cool by insulting his shorts."

On Monday, a photographer pestering the comedy star caught him on tape using a homophobic slur (TMZ has the video). Hill, who was walking with friends in L.A., did his best to ignore the paparazzo, who was dancing around and shouting questions. "I like the shorts, though, bro. They're pretty sexy," the photographer said at one point, apparently a swipe at Hill's flowery summer shorts. Hill eventually lost his cool and yelled, "Suck my d—, you f—," at the photographer.

On Tuesday, Hill, who's been known as a strong supporter of the LGBT community, went on The Howard Stern Show to offer his sincere apology for using the slur. "In that moment, I said a disgusting word that does not at all reflect how I feel about any group of people. I grew up with gay family members. I'm leaving here to go spend the day with one of my closest co-workers and best friend, who is gay, who's getting married, who I'm going to stand (with) at his wedding," Hill told Stern.

Flanders Fields tour not one to forget

Belgium. 100 years on, the gravity of the Great War comes to life while wandering through Ypres

Crimson poppies still dance in the breeze as if nothing horrific happened in Flanders Fields of Ypres. But a century after the start of the First World War, the flowers endure as a symbol of the dead, in part because of a celebrated poem:

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow — Between the crosses, row on row."

The famous flowers are among many reminders of the region's connection to the Great War. Amid monuments and headstones in this western corner of Belgium, Flanders' eerie landscapes, trenches and bunkers continue to evoke the soldiers who died here by the hundreds of thousands. As carefree 21st century travel goes, a tour of Flanders Fields packs a punch that can long stay with you.

The haunting poem, In Flanders Fields, was written by Lt. Col. John McCrae, a doctor from Guelph, Ont., who ran a field hospital during the war. During a recent wreath-laying ceremony at the massive Tyne Cot burial grounds to honour the dead, the poem was read aloud by a student visiting with a group from St. George's Academy in Sleaford, England.

"The kids are really moved by it," said teacher Charlotte Tilley. "We had about half a dozen crying."

One stunning aspect of a visit here is the region's beauty and serenity. A spectacular springtime has turned the once barren, muddy battlegrounds lush with ripening wheat fields and pastures where cattle chew thick grass.

Walk through Ypres, which has four battles named for it, and you'd be forgiven for thinking you're in a splendidly preserved medieval town with a Gothic hall, gabled houses and spires. But what was left of the town on Nov. 11, 1918 — when the war ended — were stumps, rubble and vague memories where homes once stood. Ypres' second battle saw the first use of chemical weapons in warfare, and its third, named for the tiny village of Passchendaele, saw 150,000 men die in 100 days.

Some wanted Ypres to stay in ruins as remembrance. The people immediately decided otherwise and started rebuilding, "as if there never had been a war. It was very much a psychological reaction," said Piet Chielens, the co-ordinator of the In Flanders Fields museum, which is housed in the rebuilt neo-Gothic hall on the marketplace.

"Ypres immediately became a centre of remembrance. The first tourists and pilgrims arrived in early spring of 1919," said Chielens.

Massive crowds are expected this year. "We believe there will be something like half a million visitors this year coming

Quoted

"The real museum is still out there. The traces, the scars in the landscape, the numerous monuments and cemeteries that will give you that sense of loss and tragedy."

from at least 70 different nations," Chielens said.

Even ahead of the official start of the centenary in August, hundreds, sometimes a few thousand, flock to the 8 p.m. playing of the Last Post, the daily salute at Ypres' Menin Gate, where walls list 54,000 soldiers who perished but were never found.

The deafening silence once the bugle stops playing is a must in remembrance tourism, as is the In Flanders Fields Museum. But visitors should also take time away from the ceremonies and crowds to wander across the flat fields dotted with low-flung ridges where so many fought and died.

"The real museum is still out there," said Chielens. "The traces, the scars in the landscape, the numerous monuments and cemeteries that will give you that sense of loss and tragedy."

It might be a tiny cemetery where only dozens of soldiers lie, a rain-sodden trench, or a derelict German bunker.

The city of Diksmuide has the Ijzertoren memorial with sweeping views of battlefields from atop its 84-metre (275-foot) tower. Nearby, the warren of Dodengang trenches brings the claustrophobia of war home, even if it no longer has the rats, stench and enemy within shouting distance.

Yet tourists should not limit their trip to pondering war. "You learn to understand what the importance of living and enjoying life is after you have been confronted with the experience," Chielens said.

For kids, that might mean a visit to the Bellewaerde theme park. For grown-ups, gastronomy stands out. Those with money and sense to reserve ahead should try In De Wulf, considered one of the world's best restaurants, in the village of Dranouter, close to the Kemmel Ridge battle site.

You might spot a chef picking flowers in the fields that will turn up on your dinner plate, or you might be served, as a vegetable, shoots from hop plants used in brewing the region's famous beer.

For tourists, there's nothing like a summer's evening with a Hommelbier or St. Bernardus Tripel on a terrace to let the day sink in. And while the memory of those fluttering poppies may fade, the sense of what happened here will likely grow stronger. As McCrae wrote:

"If ye break faith with us who die — We shall not sleep, though poppies grow — In Flanders fields."

Remember the Alamo

From the very day General Antonio López de Santa Anna and his army arrived outside San Antonio, Texas (Feb. 23, 1836), people have been talking about the ensuing battle, the people involved and the myths that sprang from this legendary part of American history. The state's top tourist attraction, the Alamo sees more than 2.5 million visitors every year at the 4.2-acre site. For 13 days, the Texan and Tejano defenders stood their ground, getting help from outside volunteers in this tug-of-war over Texas. Among the able bodies were knife fighter Jim Bowie of Bowie knife fame, and former Tennessee congressman David Crockett. The museum does a nice job of making your visit interesting. Cruise your way through culture shock caused by any new cubicle

It's a new job, it's a new day, and you're feeling good. Don't be daunted by the difference in atmosphere from one office to the next

MICHELLE SAMMUT

If you're ready to make a career move, transitioning from one office to another can be a challenge. You've done your homework on Company X and have the skill set to succeed in your new role, but the everyday details of your new environment are a mystery.

Organizational culture is the overall system of beliefs, behaviours, customs and dynamics that make up the identity of a workplace.

There are as many different types of culture as there are companies, so how do you prepare yourself for success if your past and present work cultures are like night and day?

Here are seven useful tips to ensure a smooth transition and help you overcome any office culture shock.

Before you get there

1. Establish a cultural checklist. Make a list of the qualities you liked and disliked about your last workplace to figure out which cultural qualities you need at the office in order to thrive (like an open-door policy with management) and those you can live without (lunchtime yoga classes). Developing your sense of self-awareness can help to inform your future career strategy.

2. Identify what Company X's online presence is like. Are they active on social media? Do they have a blog? Does their website feature staff photos or personal bios? If an online culture is fun and interactive it may reflect a youthful culture offline. If their online presence is more formal, offline culture could be by the book.

3. Ask strategic questions during an interview to get an idea of how your cultural checklist might fit with theirs. Targeted questions that touch on issues like work/life balance can offer you a glimpse of their cultural expectations and help you determine whether you can get behind them. Potential questions include: "What does the busiest time of year look like?" and "Which teams will I be interacting with?"

Once you arrive

4. Embark on a "culture walk" around the office

Are the people around you sharing stories about their weekend or are they talking about work? The level of personal interaction at a workplace can reflect whether a culture values building community or growing the bottom line versus.

and look for artifacts that implicitly tell a company story. Family photos on desks, accomplishments on office walls, memos on bulletin boards and the arrangement of furniture can all provide insights. Marketdriven cultures typically have financial goals and targets displayed in plain view on whiteboards. Highly collaborative cultures might have open-concept work areas where desks are arranged into clusters.

5. Listen to the conversations happening around the office. You can discern culture by the way work is communicated. Are projects assigned primarily through email or is your manager more likely to stop by your desk to chat about it in person?

6. Find a mentor who can help you navigate office norms and habits. Invite them out for coffee as a way to get to know them better and learn more about their time with Company X.

7. Ask around about social initiatives and activities at the organization, such as volunteer programs or organized sports leagues. Establishing personal connections can sometimes be a challenge at larger organizations, so getting involved outside of the office can help you build social capital. The initiatives a company is involved with can also be a great indication of their cultural values.

Remember, adjusting to a new role always takes some time. Be patient with the process and be proud of yourself

Swap screen time for green time

Pitch in. Get involved in an event to celebrate our country's progress and raise awareness

MICHELLE WILLIAMS

This week, Canadians are participating in community and national events designed to celebrate, appreciate and teach us about caring for our environment.

Environment Week, from June 1 to 7, is an annual event that inspires preservation, protection and restoration of our environment. This year's theme is Strengthening Our Environment for Today and Tomorrow, but this grassroots celebration has strong roots to our country's past.

The concept dates back to 1970, when a growing concern about pollution led to the notion that Canada should devote one week each year to focus on the environment.

"Canadians spend about half as much time outside as they did a couple generations ago, and more than six hours of screen time each day.

Environment Week events provide opportunities to replace screen time with green time and get involved in environmental causes in their community," says Jode Roberts, spokesperson from the David Suzuki Foundation, one of the country's leading environmental organizations.

There are celebrations happening all across the country throughout the week to bring awareness to the challenges our environment faces today and what we need to do for a more environmentally-friendly tomorrow. Here are just two of the key events:

World Environment Day on Thursday is an opportunity to recognize the progress we've made when it comes to caring for our environment, but also reminds us all that our efforts must continue throughout the year. The philosophy is that every effort to protect and preserve our environment counts, whether it's big or small.

Thursday is also Clean Air Day, a time to promote the importance of clean air, and prompt all Canadians to continue making changes in the way we live to help reduce the impact of our environmental footprint.

The creative commuter: How to shrink your eco footprint

With the warm, sunny weather finally here, many Canadians are taking the opportunity to reflect on the environmental impacts of their daily routines. For commuters especially, summer's imminent arrival provides a perfect backdrop for Canadian Environment Week, which encourages everyone to play a role in protecting the natural world by choosing eco-friendly transportation.

Enjoying an environmentally-conscious commute is not only good for the Earth, but also for your physical and mental health. Cycling in to work has never been easier, as ever-expanding networks of bike paths help make Canadian cities more and more friendly for pedallers. Even if your entire route to work is not cycle-safe, biking to a convenient transit stop and hopping on board a bus or train offers an eco-friendly alternative to driving.

If taking the car is a must, a carpool or ride share provides opportunities to socialize with fellow commuters, reduce congestion on the roads, and decrease smog and greenhouse-gas emissions.

While your choice of transportation has vast environmental impacts, there is more to your commute than the wheels that get you to work on time. Incorporating sustainable choices into morning rituals such as packing a lunch and a cup of coffee can make a small but important difference. Rather than plastic wrap or tinfoil, for instance, try reusable containers. Similarly, buying snacks in bulk, as opposed to in individual packages, helps reduce your environmental footprint.

And rather than carrying your new food containers in a run-of-the-mill plastic bag, try a reusable one made of canvas or recycled materials. They're trendy, washable, can be personalized, and will last much longer than a plastic bag. For coffee drinkers, cut down the amount of trash on your commute by using a travel mug, so even that hot cup of java has a smaller impact on the environment. KIERAN VAN/FOR METRO

FIFA VP blasts newspaper over corruption charge

FIFA vice-president Michel Platini has criticized a British newspaper for linking him to corruption claims about Qatar's 2022 World Cup bid.
The Daily Telegraph led

Tuesday's edition reporting that Platini secretly met with his FIFA board colleague Mohamed bin Hammam of Qatar "shortly before" the World Cup vote in December 2010.

The claim follows the rival Sunday Times alleging that Bin Hammam, who FIFA expelled in 2012, paid soccer officials millions of dollars to support Qatar's successful campaign.

"I find it astonishing that conversations with a fellow member of the FIFA Executive Committee could suddenly be transformed into a matter of state," Platini said in the letter released by UEFA.

Kings, Rangers have taken long roads to final

It's taken the Kings 21 playoff games and the Rangers 20 to get to this Stanley Cup final. They have survived five Game

But in truth, the journey started a lot longer ago.

The ride cost Los Angeles forward Jeff Carter his two front teeth. Ask him how it happened and he digs deep into the memory bank.

The Kings are nearing the record for most playoff games in a season. The current mark is 26, set by the 1987 Philadelphia Flyers and 2004 Calgary Flames. The most games by a Cup winner is 25, by the 2006 Carolina Hurricanes and 2011 Boston

drive@metronews.c

Small cars have a hard time in North America, the land of the Denny's Grand Slam Breakfast and the 7-Eleven Big Gulp: If we can finish it, you didn't make it big enough.

But a new breed of small cars has been winning fans recently, due to their new-found features and hip styling, which were heretofore only available in larger, more expensive cars. But some of this nice stuff has pushed prices to where many small cars no longer wear small price tags.

Enter the 2015 Nissan Micra. At $9,998, it has the lowest base price of any new vehicle available in Canada. (Destination and PDI charges are $1,400.)

Micra's pricing advantage gets diminished once you move off that S base model with the 5-speed manual transmission. Add automatic transmission, air conditioning and cruise, and you're looking at another $3,000 or so.

But pricing always stays low and lovely on all three trim levels (S, SV and SR).

The main point is that Nissan gives you a sub-$10,000 option and others don't.

Micra also turns out be to be a great little vehicle. I recently took a very-white, top-level SR model out for a twirl, and was surprised by how much fun it was to drive.

The five-speed manual was smooth and quick to shift, and the 106-hp 1.6-litre engine was torque-y and very agreeable to being revved.

Overall, it feels zippy, which is actually preferable to a car that might be more zippy, but doesn't transmit that feeling to the driver.

It also handles well, due to the European-spec suspension, with an additional sway bar. The Canadian Micra is the only Micra in the world with both front and rear sway bars.

The rear accommodations are predictably tight for a car that stretches just 3.8 metres. But the upside is great agility, and more parking opportunities around town.

Its turning radius is also ridiculously short. You can easily turn around in the middle of most side streets. Sometimes it's good to be small.

You have to hand it to Nissan for finding this low-cost gap in the market, and for wanting to exploit it to get more new customers into the Nissan fold — customers that traditionally might have gone to the used market. Nissan even has a special financing program, just for first-time buyers that choose Micra — no previous credit history required.

Shift: Electric vehicles get a charge out of new markets and great ratings, lightening up on fuel and on roads

Tesla eyes Chinese production

California's Tesla Motors says it will build cars in China within three to four years specifically for that growing market, but not in lieu of building them in the United States. That's in addition to current U.S. production, says CEO Elon Musk.

Tesla plans to spend "hundreds of millions of dollars" building a plant and installing "big" network of battery charging stations in China, reports Bloomberg News Service. While a location wasn't announced, Musk said local production in that country would allow Tesla to sell cars at cheaper prices there by avoiding China's 25 per cent import tariff on vehicles built outside its borders.

BMW electric a 'goer' in two guises

Not only is the electric i3 city car different from every other vehicle BMW has ever made, it is also the most efficient, with its U.S. Environmental Protection Agency rating of 117 miles per U.S. gallon-equivalent for the car on battery power alone, 39 mpg once running on its twin-cylinder gasoline generator, and an electric range of 115 kilometres.

By comparison, observes auto enthusiast news website, Motor Authority, those electric numbers are slightly lower than the lighter, all-electric i3, which gets 124 MPGe and has an 130-kilometre range. The rangeextended numbers are even higher than the leading range-extended car on the market, the Chevrolet Volt, which returns 98 MPGe and 37 mpg combined on its four-cylinder engine.

- Chrysler will be the only brand under the newly restructured Fiat Chrysler Automobiles to offer a minivan, and will also be the first to offer plug-in hybrid vehicles. Under a new five-year plan, Chrysler will serve the mainstream audience.
- Despite announcing that production of its Insight hybrid will end this year, Honda says no production changes are planned for its Civic CR-Z and Civic Hybrid models, and that it is committed to the expansion of its hybrid offerings in North America.
- Mercedes-Benz is considering the use of three-cylinder engines for hybrid applications in future compact vehicles, reports Car and Driver magazine.

High-strength steel.

Automakers can use several grades in a vehicle for optimum performance

drive@metronews.c

Automakers face two major challenges when they build vehicles. Cars must be strong enough to protect occupants in a crash, but they must also be as lightweight as possible to meet stringent fuel-economy standards.

One product that addresses both issues is high-strength steel, which itself is constantly being improved for better performance.

"There are different types and grades, with unique microstructural characteristics that engineers build into the product," says Ron Watkins, president of the Canadian Steel Producers Association. "It's a tremendous amount of work, but the auto industry is always looking for fuel efficiency."

Steel becomes stronger through three factors: alloys such as manganese, boron or silicon that are added to the molten steel mix; continuous slab production to ensure each section receives the same heating and cooling treatment; and "work hardening," when stamping or forming parts, which alters steel's structure.

By adjusting the ingredients used, or the way the steel is processed, steelmakers can produce various strengths, including the strongest advanced high-strength steel (AHSS). Auto manufacturers may use several grades in a vehicle, depending on each component's function and where it's located, for optimum performance.

In a crash, cars need to crumple progressively, gradually absorbing the crash

All about steel

- Automakers first started using high-strength steel in the 1970s, when a gas crisis made fuel efficiency a priority with buyers.
- Steel strength is measured in megapascals (MPa). Regular steel is around 300 MPa, while highstrength steel usually ranges from 590 to 780. Some advanced steels can go as high as 1,800 MPa.
- Steel's thickness used to be measured in gauge, with higher numbers indicating thinner panels, but it's now more common to measure it in millimetres.

energy so it isn't transmitted to the occupants. Different steel grades can be used to create this gradual crunch, with the highest-strength steel used in the passenger compartment, which has to remain intact and uncrushed.

AHSS is more expensive than conventional steel, but because it's so much stronger, automakers use less of it overall. In some cases, a component made of AHSS could be as strong as one made of regular steel, but contain 20 to 35 per cent less material, which helps to offset the high-strength steel's extra cost. The major benefit is that the car now weighs less, which improves fuel efficiency.

So why not make the whole car out of it? It comes down to selecting the most appropriate product for each component, how strong it needs to be, and the price. A hood doesn't have a heavy load requirement, for example, so an automaker is more likely to make a lightweight version out of lowercost aluminum than higherpriced AHSS.

The three R's

"Cars are shredded and reduced back down to basic steel again. It's infinitely recyclable."

Ron Watkins, president of the Canadian Steel Producers Association, on the ability to melt down high-strength steel with any other grade of scrap steel to form a new product
